PERSONAL DATA RECORD - CONTINUED

In addition to basic information about where you live, where you attend high school, and what your grades are, colleges will also ask you questions about your background including your parents and siblings. Now is the time to ask your parents more about their backgrounds - Did they attend college? What level did they achieve? What did they study? What is their racial identity? Answers to these questions help colleges better understand the students they are serving and sometimes even lead to additional scholarship opportunities.
